THURSDAY EVENING, JUNE 22, 1882.

THE INCREASING expense of the common schools in Massachusetts has been the means of opening the eyes of some of the people of that State to the gross injustice that was inpelled to educate all the negroes within her limits. The North freed the slaves of the ton as they had been led to believe. South and then forced their impoverished masters to educate them. But now, after many years, and when the burden of educating her own people is beginning to be felt. Massachusetts at last sees the injustice of the system she helped to force upon the South, and her Governor and other leading men, in order that she may receive her share of the benefit, have petitioned Conschools, to be distributed among the several States according to the ratio of illiteracy among their inhabitants.

MR. WHEELER, who lately filled the office of Vice President, was always an eminently practical man, and that he has not yet lost that characteristics is proved by his recent circumstances could the work of that commission amount to anything. Mr. Wheeler is a pronounced protectionist and will supcommission is only a weak device to delay action upon the tariff question, and he is naturally unwilling to lend himself to any such scheme.

FROM WASHINGTON

[Special Correspondence of the Alexandria Gazette.] Washington, D. C., June 22.-General Mahone couldn't hold all his, the republican side, of the Senate yesterday on the bill for public buildings at Harrisonburg and Abingdon, but the defection on that side was more than offset by the number of democrats Senator Johnston induced to vote for the bill, and so it went through without much difficulty. Whether it will go through the House as easily is a different thing, but it is hardly possible.

Mr. Dezendorf has returned from his recent visit to his district and was in his seat in the House to-day. He addressed the republicans of Southampton county while he was gone. There was as large a meeting as usually attends June Court in that county, and a large majority of those present were in his favor, many of the leading men assuring him that they fully endorsed his course and would support his re-election. Some of Mahone's strikers, including his postmaster afternoon in the office of Geo. H.Sanborn & at Norfolk, were present and attempted to interrupt Mr. Dezendorf, but finding the flicted upon the South when she was com- sentiment of the crowd emphatically against them, soon desisted and acknowledged that things were not as favorable in Southamp-

"In that case," retorted Mr. Wilson, "I shall have to ask from the Court an order upon Inspector Woodward for all of the papers in connection with routes No. 44154 and 40101. I also ask for a like subpæna upon Mr. Geo. Bliss." This remark brought the controversy to an ab-upt close and the examination of the witnesses report as follows: In accordance with the requirements of the Constitution, the following report is respectfully

The past year has not been marked by any great event in our history. The association has pursued the even tenor of its way without special gain or loss in numbers or interest.

The only departure from the usual course been the change in the place of holding the Sabbath afternoon prayer meeting.

The experiment has been tried of holding this meeting at one fixed church, instead of at the different churches in turn. The results thus far have been favorable. Several causes have operated against the real or apparent prosperity of the associatiou. The most serious of these, however, is not peculiar to this year alone. It is an old trouble which will probably continue in a greater or less degree while the association exists. This obstacle is the want of fidelity among the members. We have a large membership on the roll, but the faithful ones are few in number. The great privilege of being a co-worker with God in the redemption of the world is either not apprehended at all, or so faintly apprephended as to exert little influence over The necessity for a new consecration of the members to the work is most evident. It is recommended therefore for the coming year that our efforts and prayers be directed mainly to the work of preparation for the Master's service; that we plead with God that He may fit us to do His work; that He may bring us into such relations with Himself, that He may be able to use us in the salvation of men. Invoking the guidance of the Holy Spirit upor our work I sign myself, Your Brother in Christ. H. W. BEADLE, President.

After a full conference as to the means to be employed in the various activities of the Association in order to make them more effective, and singing the Doxology, the As:ociation adjourned.

[COMMUNICATED. The Congressman at Large.

The power to forbid a convention is one thing, the expediency of calling one another and entirely different question. The other and entirely different question. The latter only did I attempt to discuss in track. No one connected with the freight my former communication. That the state | train was hurt. committee would feel controled by the almost unanimous sentiment of the domocratic party against a convention, I have no doubt. That sentiment must, therefore, be ascertained in some way. The State committee can easily ascertain it, and the various elected by the people, can ratify their action if necessary or expedient. All through let us remember that but for Massey and the "Big Four" the democrats to-day would only have been interested in two districts out often; while now we have a certainty of six and a probability of eight members of Congress. "J. S. B.," was that service deserving of no reward? But for their aid every Circuit Judge would have been displaced and Mahoneites put in power in their stead. Does not that deserve rereward? But for them, one hundred new officers would have been placed in the gift of the Governor wherewith to reward Mahone's friends in every county, and by their patronage start therein a Mahone organ-a servile creature of the Boss supported by the money of litigants. Are these services to be ignored because for sooth Mr. John E. Massey differed with us on the debt question? The democratic members of the General Assembly do not claim any right in this matter, but that of any citizen—the right to express an opinion. But so far as I know they (not "a few") were unanimous in his favor. Nor were they "aware of the intended candidacy of Massey a little too previous." I know that no bargain was Appeals.

made with either himself or the "Big Four" touching this matter; but that gratitude to the men who delivered Virginia from the infamous schemes of the Boss and his gang did induce members of the Legislature to become his true political supporters for this campaign I have no doubt. Mr. Massey has no idea of retiring to private life, and therefore the question is, shall we welcome him back or cast him out? I think, when I recall the matchless skill of the man as a debater, his capacity as an officer of the Commonwealth, his popularity in his party, that in the present condition of affairs there is room for him in the democratic fold, those who themselves wish to run or whose friends wish to put them forward to the contrary.

Your articles, "J. S. B.," try to disguise it as you may, from beginning to end, show hostility upon the debt question towards Mr. Massey. That question has been fought in politics until every interest of the State demands a halt. Mahone is willing to have it revived, for every discussion but adds to his hold upon this commonwealth. Let it pass forever. Those who own the debt furnished the money and the offices that beat us last fall. Let them look to their allies for payment.

And now why should we not aid Massey in his fight against Mahoneism? Because he left us upon the debt? If so, how can we ask those who followed him (and whose support we must have) to come back to us? If he is not worthy to come, are they?

Is it not written (substantially) that there is more joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth than over ninety and nine that went not astray; and therefore, taking even "J. S. B's." views, is it not our duty to receive back to the party upon equal terms one who declares now, as always, that he is and was a democrat? citizens and vistors, and a grand display of

Take up nine out of ten of the newspapers in the State and they favor Massey. Ask nineteen out of twenty of the leading politicians of the State and they declare for him. Opposition comes from three sources: first, those few who, like J. S. B., base it upon the debt; second, those who wish to run themselves or whose friends wish to run them; third, the Mahoneites. Such opposition of the first two classes must give way before the overwhelming sentiment of the masses in Massey's favor.

The time has come to sacrifice a little pride, if necessary, and redeem our State; to disown the Boss and his rule by a decided vote, and reunite our party. It is for the people to judge whether this can be best accomplished by the ultra views of J. S. B. or those expressed herein by Alexandria, June 22.

Since writing the above I have seen the eard of "X." Surely he does not mean that in a contest between John S. Wise, a bitter Mahoneite, and John E. Massey a democrat, any good conservative would hesitate how to vote. The one an exponent of the Boss's views, the other openly antagonizing them. Is it to be believed that any considerable number would decline to vote for Massey when endorsed by the district conventions and thereby elect Wise? Assnredly not.

The Collision on the Virginia Midland Railroad. The Danville Register gives the following account of the collision on the Virginia Midland Railroad on Monday morning :

A freight traain under the conduct of Conductor Nalls was at Fall Creek Station and the engineer and crew were engaged in shifting a lot of loaded coal gondolas and attaching them to the train to be brought on to Danville. It was the hour of arrival of the regular mail and passenger train from Lynchburg, which, however, as it afterwards appeared, was thirty-four minutes be-Danville side of the station sent forward a flag-man to warn the train approaching from Lynchburg, but it seems the flag-man was either not started in time, did not go far enough, or was not observed soon enough. The train from Lynchburg came thundering along at full speed to make up for lost time and the engineer, Elisha Butler, saw the flag man and the coal goudolas on the track in front of his train at about the same moment. He reversed his engine, put on sand and applied the air-brakes which, however, would not work, in order to stop his train, but failing to do it he jumped off his engine, striking his head against a rock and sustaining other serious injuries. The coal gondolas had been shifted from the siding and standing on the main track, but the switch had not been replaced for the main track and when the frain from Lynchburg reached this switch it ran off the end of the rails and went bounding along the cross-ties until the engine struck the coal gondolas, not full plump but rather sidewise. On the cab of the engine after engineer Butler jumped off were left his fireman, Harry Brown, and D. A. Brown, a yard brakeman at North Danville, who was coming on to his work. After the engine struck the coal gondolas it was thrown off the road bed and a little way down the embankment which is only small at that point. D. A. Brown was considerably bruised and scalded, but it is believed that his injuries are not serious. The fireman, Harry Brown, was not hurt. Next to the engine was a United States Postal Car in which were three postal clerks and a messen-ger-Messrs. J. B. Cook, George W. Carr and G. F. Larrabe. Mr. Cook was knocked senseless by the concussion but soon recovered and at last accounts was attending to duty as usual. The postal car was badly damaged by the coal gondolas against which it was precipitated. One side of it was torn completely off. The baggage car was next and one corner of it was damaged a little, but nobody on it was injured. None of the passenger cars were injured and no passengers were injured. All the cars except the

When confronted with these fundamental safeguards, however, as to this class of coupons I am clearly of opinion that it falls to the ground impotent and harmless. I am clearly of the opinion, therefore, that this law is unconstitutional as to this class of coupons, and that the mandamus should be awarded in this case, inasmuch as the Treasurer is acting bona fide, and simply trying to ascertain his duty in order to perform it legally, I think it would be unjust to require him to pay the costs of this the first pro-ceeding of this kind under this act.

The Court directed the mandamus to be issued. It is said the case will be taken to the Court of
